

Debra Rosenbury

Bio

Deb Rosenbury grew up in northern Indiana and began an extended career in the business world. She maintained an active interest in the arts throughout her career and started attending Interior Design classes at Indiana University. Through moves to Florida, Connecticut, Texas, Tennessee, and ultimately to Atlanta, GA, she continued to add creative experiences and ultimately started an interior design business while living in Texas. With her move to Nashville, TN, she had to restart her business, which eventually culminated with her opening her own home interior store. Working in interior design and creating beautiful living spaces with fabrics, paints, patterns, and accessories inspired her soul and further fueled her interest.

After landing in Atlanta, she started a cottage business making charming handcrafted items for local home stores. The company grew to the point where she needed additional space, and she moved into an artist studio space in 2013. Being more fully immersed in the artist community, she became inspired to try painting. It totally consumed her. Once she picked up a paintbrush, there was no turning back. Being primarily self-taught, she was free to experiment and calls it one of her best decisions.

As Deb Rosenbury's skills and following continued to grow, so did her need for a larger studio space. She now operates from the Marietta Art Collective, a space she has expanded to accommodate other artists. Her active participation in the Marietta, GA art scene is a testament to her ongoing commitment to the arts and her continuous creative evolution.
